

Center ISD Highly Qualified Teacher Report

No Child Left Behind (NCLB) requires districts to publicly report the annual progress for the district as a whole and for each of its campuses in meeting the State’s measurable objectives in four areas: (1) Percentage of classes taught by highly qualified teachers; (2) percentage of classes taught by highly qualified teachers for high-poverty schools; (3) percentage of highly qualified teachers; and (4) percentage of teachers receiving high-quality professional development. Since school year 2005-2006, the State’s target has been 100% in all areas.

The State has recently transitioned from end-of-year Highly Qualified Teacher (HQT) compliance reporting to beginning-of-year Highly Qualified Teacher compliance reporting. Therefore, Center ISD is reporting data on both the 2006-2007 Highly Qualified Teacher status and the 2007-2008 Highly Qualified Teacher status. The 2007-2008 status is subject to change as this reflects the district’s status as of October 15, 2007.

Teachers who have not met the requirements for Highly Qualified in their current teaching assignment are working to fulfill these requirements as required in their professional development plan. For example, the special education teacher at the high school has taken and passed the TExES exam required to complete the requirements for Highly Qualified. As soon as the application to have this supplemental certification added to the teacher’s certification record with the State Board for Educator Certification (SBEC), then the 2007-2008 Highly Qualified Teacher compliance report will be amended to show this teacher has met all requirements to be Highly Qualified in the current teaching assignment. Some teachers are testing in December while others are working on other requirements as detailed in their individual professional development plan.
